

College Prep Leadership Program

For those interested in preparing students for college and applying to a four-year university, we're expanding on our high school program and offering two new classes that can be taken separately or together that function as a college preparation track that's suitable for 8th-12th grades. These classes will help students develop the skills and engage in the activities that will prepare them for college success and make them competitive candidates for acceptance.

We're offering two tracks: College Prep Leadership Skills workshops and College Prep Leadership Council.

The workshops focus on study skills, life skills, stress management, note-taking, time management, personal growth, and similar topics and skills you need for college success.

The Council focuses on actual activities to put on college applications, resumes, and job applications. These include volunteer hours and internships, clubs, leadership positions, and more. This group gives students opportunities to function in a group, make a difference in their communities, participate in student leadership, and more.

Here are some reasons to join the workshops:

- You're an 8th grader or high school student wanting to develop the skills to succeed in community college classes as a high schooler.
- You're a high school student who's doing well, but want to be sure you have strong skills for college life.
- You'd like to develop your leadership skills.
- You've ever thought of going to high school so you can start or join clubs, participate in student government, or have more "extra-curriculars" for your college applications or personal experience.
- You'd like to be part of a motivated group who's helping their community and growing personally as well as academically.

There are other reasons to join, too, but here are some of the top motivations.

This group will be run by Lizzie Scott, an experienced teacher and homeschooling mom who's been through the college application experience with one son and has another son she's preparing to be a strong candidate as well. Look for these choices on the Fall 2018 Schedule—we'd love to have you join us!
